The Moon, in layman just a mere rock in space
orbiting Earth visible through the night sky reflecting light given off by the Sun
A rock with many phases and faces
as it completes a full month cycle around Earth.

The Moon, much more than a mere rock,
with power to influence behavior and emotions.
As ocean tides swells and ravages coastlines
to the calmness and tranquility of a cool sea side breeze.

The Moon, a majestic rock that rule over the night sky,
watching over her subject lighting the way for lost soul
to find their way back to comfort slumber.
Fueling dreams and fantasies, inspiring myths, extraordinary tales that ignites the inner child in all of us

Moon tales

Pareidola, anthropomorphic images on the different surfaces of the moon might explain reasons for myths and folklores of the moon, perceptual experiences might have sparks the stories in cultures across the globes.

The moon has inspired sacred myths and folktales in many cultures. Some as old as the civilizations and some are modern stories told for the simple joy a tale stirs our imaginations.

The history of tonic water begins in 17th, century Peru when Spanish colonists discovered a treatment for malaria in the bark of the quinaquina tree. One account insists that the Countess of Chinchon, the Peruvian viceroy's wife, took the bark to Spain around 1640 after it saved her from malaria. Another proposes that a Jesuit missionary named Barnabe de Cobo made the first trans-Atlantic delivery in 1632. Whichever the case may be, the ground bark became known as both "Countess's powder" and "Jesuit's powder" throughout Europe. In the 18th century Carolus Linnaeus chose to classify the quinaquina tree as genus "cinchona (sǐngkō`nə) or chinchona (chǐngkō`nə), name for species of the genus Cinchona, " in honor of the legendary lady. Cinchona bark is extremely bitter, so someone mixed it with sugar and carbonated water to make it more palatable. In 1858, it was first marketed commercially. Around the same time, gin was shedding its less-than-positive reputation to become a more respectable drink. Thus, a classic was born.

Identify the style of your own favourite gin, and the dominant flavours in it. We suggested pairings below

East Imperial Burma Tonic

Warm and spicy with a hint of cinnamon , top notes of lemongrass and lime.

East Imperial Yuzu Tonic

Robust and aromatic sweet citrus flavour, strong Japanese citrus fruit.

East Imperial Grapefruit Tonic

Delightful bouquet of fresh pink grapefruit flesh, packed with pomelo and citrus zest.

East Imperial Soda Water

Heavy hints of minerality, zero quinine.

Up to 1,200 eaux-de-vie, made using grapes grown in Grande Champagne – the premier cru of the Cognac region – are carefully blended over the years to create the cognac inside every LOUIS XIII Classic decanter. Provenance and time are the very essence of LOUIS XIII cognac. Each drop represents a finely tuned craft passed down from one generation of Cellar Master to the next. The eaux-de-vie are slowly aged in old Limousin tierçons (traditional aged French oak casks). Every sip is a taste of time.
